

Live in love

Where do you live?

Where do you live?

Do you live in the past? Memories filtered. Problems and anxieties left behind. Images of days gone by now a convenient justification for avoiding the challenge of today.

Live in love

Live in God

and God will live in you

Today has new challenges which are as erratic and strange as any yet lived. Today you have the love you have shared in the past, to nourish the next event. Today will come to an end. God is here, with you, during these hours

Where do you live?

Where do you live?

Do you live in and through your children? Your grandchildren. Joy only as a consequence of their actions. Distant and therefore not making personal demands. Relationships subject always to their care, as they move beyond you.

Live in love

Live in God

and God will live in you

There is a child in you who needs love. Someone for whom there is great goodness. Someone who grows tired and needs rest. Someone who needs the faith to see beyond the immediate crisis, or gesture. Who needs to invest in self with love.

Where do you live?

Where do you live?

Within the limitations of illness. Excusing the effort. Justifying the selfishness

In the promise of tomorrow. Excusing self from what is important today

Trapped in the prison of fear. Excusing inhibition by accusing the world

Cared for by ignorance. Excusing the consequence of responsibility

Live in love

Live in God

and God will live in you

Share in the pain of crucifixion and reach out even from the cross

Live love today, plan for tomorrow

Move with your fear into the healing love of the Father

Recognise your futility, and therefore look beyond, and see the wonder

Live in love

Live in God

and God will live in you

Where do you live

Each day

Where do you live

Each priority

Where do you live

You

Where do you live

Live in love

Live in God

and God will live in you
