

The Harvest is always plentiful.

The Harvest is always plentiful. There is always more to do.

Those who learn reveal there are greater discovery's to be made.

Those who build, discover that the better they build the greater requests are made upon their time.

Those who care, see beyond the immediate crisis, to root causes that can always be addressed.

The harvest is plentiful. There is always more.

Be grateful for what you can do. Then let go. Leave it in the hands of God.

The harvest is always plentiful. There is always more to do

I did a course for couples preparing for marriage. A naïve groom proclaimed that the expense of children was not a problem. He could save up. You can never be prepared for every eventuality.

So be grateful for what you can do. Then let go. Leave it in the hands of God.

It is wonderful watching parents and grandparents walking their children to school. They are preparing them for life. Feeding them clothing them encouraging them. With little idea of what lies ahead. Never capable of preparing for every eventuality.

So be grateful and enjoy what you can do. Then let go. Leave it in the hands of God.

Even at the end of the day. At the end of life there is always more. The peaceful image of the wise pensioner is ridiculous. Old age is a battle. A very strong battle of will. The body no longer able to respond.

Thus much as you may have thought you had prepared there is always more asked of you.

If only in the care of the aged frame that they love.

So be grateful and enjoy what you can do. Then let go. Leave it in the hands of God.

The harvest is always plentiful. There is always more to do.

You may have wished to play centre forward for Blackburn Rovers, and prepared on the playing fields of your childhood. Seeking that perfect control. But there was always more to develop. So be satisfied with what was achieved, and let go.

You may have wished that the home you built would be without anxiety, sharing the burdens in harmony. Enjoy the home you have.

Be happy with the truth and not an image on face book.

Rejoice in what is there. Then let go

You may look to what you thought you had

You may look to what you thought you should have

You may always seek for what is just beyond you.

You may plan for tomorrow

But live for today

Plan for tomorrow. But live for today.

The Harvest is always plentiful. There is always more to do.

So be grateful and enjoy what you can do.

Then let go.

Leave it in the hands of God.

And pray that there be more labourers

sent to the harvest.
